Special Instructions and Comments:

The excessive tearing and squinting in Sascha's eyes is due to entropion. Entropion is rolling in of the eyelids resulting in facial hair rubbing on the cornea. This is irritating and leads to corneal scarring and impaired vision. The problem is inherited and due to weak cartilage in the eyelids. Correction of the problem requires surgically rolling the eyelid out. Correction of secondary problems such as excessive fore head skin or skin infections is also important. The disease can recur over time in some breeds.

The use of lubricating ointments in the eye helps improve comfort but surgical correction of the entropion is recommended. Please call us to schedule surgery if desired.
